Time to Be Merry and Bright

The Winter Season is finally here and as the students race through their finals to go home for vacation, it is the perfect time to end the year off right! Clean up 2017.... Time to go through those old emails and organize them into files, clean up old closets that are rarely used or filing cabinets with outdated forms. 2018 is going to be an amazing year and it is our time now to prepare for it and give it a hearty welcome! Along with preparing for the new year with work, it is also the time to clean out negative emotions or ideas that may cause anxiety. December is the month for joy! Just like our students, let's get through our necessary work and take the time for what is truly important, family and friends.

Leadership Secrets of Santa

The Leadership Secrets of Santa Claus was a fun and quirky book. Consisting of chapters such as "Choose Your Reindeer Wisely", "Share the Milk and Cookies" and "Build a Wonderful Workshop", the book does a good job taking valuable topics in leadership and breaking it down in a simple way from the viewpoint of Santa Claus. There were many parts of this book which were creative when delivering the basic fundamental concepts of leadership and would recommend this book as an intro book for a student just starting out as a leader in a club or job position for the first time. With this being said, I believe there are stronger leadership books out there and the Christmas theme was distracting from the main principles of the book from time to time. Although not a bad book, with the combination of the entry-level leadership tips, the shortness of the book, and the quirky theme, we would probably leave this book as a stocking stuffer.

Lead On! Jeff Foster

We are very excited to announce this month's Lead On! Leader, Jeff Foster. Jeff is a technologist at a molecular genetics department. Find his story in our Lead On! Section as he talks about the lessons he learned as an RA in North Carolina.
